My Interpretation Of Imagine Rotary

I believe we're only limited by our own imagination. As children we let our imagination soar and that let us become (in our minds at least) whoever we wanted to be when we grew up. But along the way we started limiting ourselves and our outlook towards life. We started letting others opinion of us dictate what we envisioned for ourselves. We lost some of our imagination, we lost ourselves, we started to conform and be judged but it's never too late to grow and soar and let the child in us take over again. At this time in my life as I focus my energy on bringing up a human who will be and is a future of this world. The Rotary International President's theme for the year resonated and made me think again. I'm letting my imagination soar hoping it will manifest itself for not just my child but for children across the world. It is our duty to leave them a planet which is not just inhabitable but will bring them joy, success and give them whatever their heart desired. So here's my wish for the future.

I would love to imagine a greener, cleaner world where people don't judge each other for the colour of their skin, their height, weight, their nationality, means of living or their religion. I would imagine a world with no boundaries and full of love for us and our children. I would imagine a world where there is equality not just in status but in gender where people would just accept each other for who they are. I want to imagine the future generations thriving, living carefree, taking care of not just themselves and their loved ones but being kind to each living organism on this planet. I would imagine them to use the resources of Mother Nature with care and cherish the abundance she provides. I would imagine a world full of happiness, contentment and growth.
