Sharanya Spots Talent

At our recent Rotary meeting, we had the pleasure of hosting Sharanya, a seasoned casting director and the creative force behind Sharanya Spots Talent. Rtn. Prasanna Rajagopalan delivered a warm and engaging introduction about how she spotted and encouraged him, setting the stage for an insightful and entertaining talk that left us all with a newfound appreciation for the art of casting.

Rtn. Prasanna Rajagopalan conducted the session in an engaging Q&A format. Sharanya explained the nuanced role of a casting director and she described how her job involves breaking people down into their core characteristics and aligning them with the visions of the director. This process requires deep collaboration with filmmakers to understand the details of each character—whether primary, secondary, tertiary or even extras. She emphasized that her work is about bringing life to the script by finding the right faces and personalities to tell the story authentically.

One of the most fascinating takeaways from her talk was her perspective on age and talent. Sharanya shared that the 45-65 age group is particularly interesting to her because they often bring a sense of freedom and authenticity to their roles. “They don’t care as much about how they’re perceived,” she said, “and that makes them incredibly compelling on screen.” However, she was quick to add that her team is always on the lookout for fresh faces of all ages. Whether young or old, new talent brings a unique energy to the screen, and she encouraged everyone to consider stepping into the world of acting.

For those hesitant to take the leap, Sharanya had reassuring words: “Acting brings out the child in you and it’s perfectly safe.” She highlighted the workshops her team conducts, which provide a supportive environment for aspiring actors to explore their potential. She also spoke about the dynamic interplay between generations on set, noting how younger actors often learn invaluable lessons from their older counterparts.

Sharanya also clarified the difference between a casting director and a casting agent. While a casting agent sources talent and maintains databases, a casting director works closely with the film’s director to understand the script and the vision for each character. This collaborative process ensures that every role, no matter how small, contributes meaningfully to the story.

Her work has given Sharanya a unique perspective on human nature. She joked that her role has almost turned her into a psychiatrist, as she often finds herself understanding people’s personalities, fears and aspirations. This deep connection with talent is what makes her so effective at her job.

Sharanya also emphasized the importance of professionalism in the industry. Her team ensures that every detail is taken care of, from start to finish, so that actors show up on time and ready to perform. This meticulous approach is a testament to her dedication to both the craft and the people she works with.

In closing, Sharanya left us with an inspiring message: acting is not just about performing—it’s about discovering new facets of yourself and connecting with others in meaningful ways. Her passion for spotting talent and nurturing it was evident throughout her talk, and it’s clear that she plays a vital role in bringing stories to life on screen.

If you’ve ever dreamed of stepping in front of the camera, Sharanya’s door is always open. Your big moment on the silver screen could be just around the corner!

Lights, Camera, Impact!

(These testimonials capture the experiences of students who participated in the filmmaking workshop facilitated by Rtn. PP. Jayshree Sridhar, Rtn. Rakesh Jaiswal, Rtn. Sanjay Rao Chaganti and Rtn. PP. PV. Mohan Raman.)

It is an absolute pleasure to share my experience of attending a remarkable filmmaking workshop—an experience that truly transformed my perspective on the art of storytelling. When I first signed up, I was driven by a passion for storytelling but lacked the technical knowledge and hands-on experience to bring my ideas to life. I knew what I wanted to create, but I wasn't sure how to translate my vision onto the screen. Yet, what I gained from this workshop went far beyond technical skills—I discovered a newfound creativity and a deep appreciation for the art of filmmaking.

Under the expert guidance of Ravishankar Sir, I learned everything I needed to know about filmmaking, from scriptwriting and cinematography to lighting, sound design and editing. Mohan Raman Sir also shared his invaluable insights, guiding us through the intricate details of the craft while encouraging us to experiment and push our creative boundaries.

One of the most valuable lessons I took away from this experience was the power of collaboration. Filmmaking is not a solo endeavour—it is a symphony of talents coming together to create something extraordinary. Whether working with a team to perfect a shot, piecing together a story in the editing room, or fine-tuning the sound during dubbing, I witnessed firsthand how every role contributes to crafting a compelling film.

I am deeply grateful to the Rotary Club of Madras for organizing this enriching workshop. It was an experience that left all of us with a sense of accomplishment that words can hardly capture. And it all began with the knowledge and encouragement I received during this transformative journey.

I am excited to share a little bit about my journey in creating this short film. It all began with a simple yet powerful idea: to highlight the importance of not wasting food and helping those in need. Many people around us faced different struggles, even in fulfilling their most basic needs. I wanted to bring this reality to light and make people reflect on it.

Once the concept was finalized, the real challenge began—crafting a compelling storyline with a well-structured screenplay. From finishing the script to scouting shooting locations, the entire process was a blend of meticulous planning, teamwork and trust. It was an incredible learning experience that taught me the value of collaboration and perseverance.

I am truly grateful to my school for giving me this opportunity. I also extend my sincere appreciation to the RCM for hosting such a meaningful event that not only showcases talent but also promotes valuable life lessons.

Boys Town Partnership 5.0

The sun shines into the large, open hallway at the front of Boys town. In one corner, Muskaan, a second-year student from Krea University, sits with Sachin and Dinesh, and together they engage in an English conversation. The boys introduce themselves and share their hobbies as Muskaan nods encouragingly. "I like cricket," says Sachin with a shy smile. "I like to eat biryani," says Dinesh, laughing.

This is our fifth batch of Krea volunteers at Boys town. We conduct two batches annually, one in February/March and another in September/October. We have 30 to 40 Krea volunteers in each batch and they come by bus to Boys town for six consecutive Sundays to teach the boys at Boys town how to read and speak in English.

The program always begins with a training session, where I have the joy and privilege of helping these idealistic young college students understand how to teach phonics, reading skills and English conversational skills. They are a very well-organized and efficient group – they have formed their own "curriculum committee" and created a curriculum for the six sessions.

Their curriculum includes vocabulary lists, conversation topics and special activities to encourage the boys to speak in English. Additionally, we have a wonderful collection of easy English readers at Boys town and the Krea volunteers work with the boys to help them develop their English reading skills. Some of the boys need to start with the alphabet and sounds, while others can already read simple sentences and paragraphs. Our goal is to ensure that every boy at Boys town is functionally literate in English by the time he gets to tenth standard.

Over the last two years, the Krea students have proved to be reliable, kind and dedicated to our boys. The boys are wonderful – eager to learn, engage with the Krea students and full of smiles. It is a partnership that works for both sides. Our boys learn to speak and read in English and more importantly, gain confidence and inspiration as they interact with these college students. The Krea students learn a lot from our boys as well – they learn about the boys’ backgrounds and dreams, they learn how to teach effectively and they begin to understand the stark effects of economic inequalities.

Rotary Nostalgia

Did You Know?

In 1967, a donation of ₹10,000 was made to the Dattatreya Orthopaedic Centre, Madras, for constructing an out-patient block. This was the second instalment of a total ₹20,000 donation made by the club.

During that year, several small projects were also undertaken to provide free aid to fire victims in the city, to put up a bus shelter on Mount Road and to supply hearing aids to the CSI Higher Secondary School for Deaf, Mylapore.

In the same year, a project with a budget of Rs. 75,000 was planned for the construction of a dormitory-style hostel at the CSI School for the Deaf in Santhome, commemorating the Birth Centenary of Paul Harris, the Founder of Rotary.

This project also attracted a donation of Rs. 15,000 from District 795 under the World Community Service (WCS) program, which was used to purchase equipment for the school for the deaf.

In 1969, the club continued its community service initiatives, supporting several social welfare institutions. The largest project that year was the construction of a compound wall for the Mamallapuram Welfare Organization, costing ₹6,000.
