प्रिय रोटेरियन,

यह जनवरी का महीना है। एक रोटेरियन के लिए नये वर्ष का यह प्रथम माह बड़ा ही खास होता है। हर रोटेरियन जानता है कि जनवरी का महीना व्यावसायिक सेवा माह (vocational service month) के नाम से जाना जाता है-जो व्यावसायिक लाभ लेने का एक अच्छा समय है। व्यावसायिक सेवा हमें सामाजिक समूह की जरूरतों को पूरा करने के लिए अपने संगठित अद्वितीय कौशल और जानकारी का उपयोग करके दूसरों को

सशक्त बनाने और दूसरों को कौशल हासिल करने या परिष्कृत करने और उनके परंपरागत या पेशेवर अवसरों को आगे बढ़ाने में मदद करने के लिए आह्वान करती है।

भिन्न-भिन्न व्यवसायों और पृष्ठभूमि के लोगों को एक साथ लेकर रोटेरी सभी कौशल और व्यवसायों के महत्व को पहचानती है। रोटेरी क्लब अपने समुदाय में व्यवसायों, संगठनों और व्यवसायों को दर्शाता है, जो अनुभवों और दृष्टिकोणों में विविधता को अपनाता है।

किसी भी व्यक्ति का व्यावसायिक जीवन और सेवा लगभग साथ-साथ ही चलती हैं। यहाँ रोटेरियन की जिम्मेदारी दोहरी हो जाती है। एक रोटेरियन अपने क्लब के भीतर अपने व्यवसायों का प्रतिनिधित्व तो करता ही है वह अपने कार्यस्थल में भी रोटेरी के आदर्शों का अनुसरण करता है।

आईए, हम सभी अपने व्यवसाय से संबंधित रोटेरी फेलोशिप में शामिल हों। ईमानदारी और निष्ठा से अपने-अपने व्यवसायों को निष्पादित करते हुए समाज के लोगों को भी इसके लिए प्रेरित करें और एक स्वस्थ-नेक तथा आत्मनिर्भर समाज बनाने की भूमिका का निर्वहन करते हुए स्वयं-समाज-देश व विश्व के लिए एक उदाहरण बनें।

Vocational Service - Rotary's First Concept

Rotary was started for business reasons and professional purposes. Paul Harris had the unusual idea that friendship and business might mix and result in even more business!

More than a century ago, Chicago and most large cities were in the grips of growing business and industry - and rife with fierce competition. Business competitors were the enemy. There were very few governmental restraints on enterprise, business practices or labor conditions and business ethics, customer service, or professional standards were seldom topics of real concern. Just making money was the goal of business.

It was in this atmosphere that Paul Harris began to wonder if one person from each business and profession could actually work together, in a non-competitive atmosphere, to help each other improve their business and income. If they were not rivals or competitors, they could be friends and help each other achieve success. Thus, the idea of friendship and business was combined -- and the idea of a Rotary Club evolved.

As a matter of fact, the constitution of the Chicago Rotary Club, written in January of 1906, stated two objects of Rotary. The first was "The promotion of the business interests of its members." The second object was the concept of friendship. This idea of business as an object of Rotary was retained in 1912, when the International Association of Rotary Clubs adopted a statement with 5 Objects of Rotary.

Although the business concept had evolved to a broader statement, it was still listed as number one - "To promote the recognition of the worthiness of all legitimate occupations, and to dignify each member's occupation as affording him an opportunity to serve society; to encourage high standards in business and professions, and to increase the efficiency of each member by the exchange of ideas and business methods."

Although the wording changed slightly from time to time as the Object was rewritten in subsequent years, the vocational service element was always retained. T.A. Warren, a British Rotarian in 1935 who became RI President in 1945-46 made an interesting comment "The only unique feature of Rotary is vocational service, everything else that we do is repeated by some other organization. If we are unique, if we have a special message or mission in the world that is unique to ourselves, it lies only in the realm of vocational service". In all of our earliest days, Vocational Service was clearly the primary focus of Rotary.

The History of the San Francisco Rotary Club tells of the early emphasis on promoting business at club meetings. As we know, San Francisco was Rotary's 2nd club, and it was a custom that prizes were frequently awarded at club meetings to the member who had made the most purchases from other members during the previous month. Past RI President, Bru Brunnier, a charter member of the San Francisco Club reported that he won the prize one month by buying 72 separate items from as many Rotary members to furnish his new engineering office in downtown San Francisco. It was also recorded that in the meeting room of the San Francisco Club a series of shelves were installed for members to display merchandise. Ten minutes of each meeting were devoted to members giving short talks about the quality of their own goods and services - or in other words - a Rotary commercial.

It was this same concept of promoting business which led to the first community service project of the original Chicago Rotary Club. In their effort to promote more business, the members decided that since the women did most of the shopping in downtown Chicago, they would do even more if they stayed downtown longer. So, what was the answer? If they put public toilets in downtown Chicago - the shoppers would not have to go home so soon. And that is what they did - installed the first public restrooms in downtown Chicago. When service is provided - business is enhanced. It was on that basis that the world's service club movement was launched.

It was Leslie Pidgeon, the RI President in 1917, who stated: "The primary object of Rotary is to relate the individual properly to his daily work. That is the first duty Rotary has to perform. The Rotary Club must educate the members to embody the idea of service in their own daily work". So from the very beginning, Rotary membership was based on classifications, and classifications were based solely on one's business, profession or vocation.

The Chicago Rotary Club, and others which followed, created a "Committee on Business Methods" which concentrated attention on the business and ethical practices and public confidence of each enterprise in their community. Rotary Clubs were regarded as leaders in fighting corruption and unfair business practices. It was as early as 1910, that Rotarian Arthur Sheldon, spoke at Rotary's first Convention in Chicago, saying: "As man comes into the light of wisdom, he comes to see that right conduct toward others pays, that business is the science of human service, and that he profits most who serves his fellows best. Thus, one of Rotary's first mottoes came into being - a basic principle of business ethics. Just a year later at the 1911 conference in Portland, Ben Collins President of the Minneapolis Rotary Club told that his Club used the principle of "Service Above Self" in all of their business and professional activities and our second motto was initiated. Both of these mottoes were officially adopted many years later at the 1950 convention in Detroit.

As Rotary continued to expand, it was not uncommon for Rotarians in the same profession to meet and discuss business ethics and fair dealings in business practices. They frequently discussed "Standards" by which business and professional practices should be judged. So after several years of preparation and debate, in 1915 Rotary was finally ready to adopt a "Rotary Code of Business Ethics" when they met at the annual Conference in San Francisco.

The "Rotary Code of Ethics" was not a law or rule, but rather it was an expression of determination to maintain certain basic ethical and honest standards in one's business or profession. The code could only be enforced by example and friendly influence and encouragement. The Rotary Code of Ethics set a high standard for men who were to be Rotarians. It was in 1927 that the confusion of referring to Rotarians' "business, profession, calling, occupation, employment or trade" was finally eliminated by adopting the word "vocation". The term 'vocation' seemed to cover every type of useful occupation, so the Rotary convention, held in Belgium in 1927, approved the words "Vocational Service" to replace business methods. When the Object of Rotary was later rewritten, "Vocational Service" became the Second Avenue of Service for Rotarians and Rotary Clubs.

Today, if we wish to put Vocational Service in its proper perspective in the lives of Rotarians, we could well look to a fundamental statement drafted by RI President, Will Manier and adopted at the 1934 RI Convention in St. Louis which said: "Fundamentally, Rotary is a philosophy of life that undertakes to reconcile the ever present conflict between the desire to profit for one's self and the duty and consequent impulse to serve others. The philosophy is the philosophy of service - Service Above Self -- and is based on the practical ethical principle that "He Profits Most Who Serves Best." That is the basis of all Vocational Service activities of Rotary.

If Vocational Service was the basis for Rotary's activities in the beginning of our first century, this may be the time to restore business and professional ethical concerns as Rotary's primary responsibility as we march ahead. So, let us celebrate this month as we contemplate the role of Vocational Service in Rotary.

“Konichiwa” – From the land of rising Sun

Before I began talking about Kaizen, we should know about Japan and their history., A small country where the sun rises for first side among eastern countries., A country adversaries are daily occurrence., small country where mostly things did not get produced everything has to be imported., hence cost is high for everything apart from normal things. We are known Japan for electronics, car, electricals equipment etc., Being in the fault line i.e. Seismic plate earthquake comes inheritance from ages. Sometimes the weather are rough and due to earthquake we see Tsunami waves which has devastated Japan 2011., Apart from this the early history of World War II where Atomic Bomb has devastated Hiroshima and Nagasaki.

In war Japan was devastated they took a ought that they would come back vengeance not in form of violence but in form of becoming world greatest economy., They had become famous for being torn apart., but now they will become famous for good things. One of thing they wanted to make a turnaround was Industries and Production and making things which would make them proud.

Looking all the above conditions cost was major thing and people scarcity during the war., they devise a simple way of working to reduce Cost in factories and other place. That's where the emotion came Kai to change Zen means for Good and that's how kaizen came to Birth. The practice of improving one condition from the earlier., In simple example if some things take 10 mins to do how I can do it 8 mins. That way of reform is called Kaizen. With this simple principle companies like Toyota, Nissan, Mitsubishi,

Yamaha etc. not only industries everyone and everplace started to reduce cost and how we can reduce Human effort., The idea is not to provide job opportunity but to save people for Longevity.,

All the Rotarians coming from various background can use this principle to improve their work, lives and home. Since Bombay and all other place the cost of property is increasing at alarming in this case who we can utilise the space in cupboard and how we organize this things at home for retrieval use and keep it back. The simple way to start working with Kaizen is to measure your work activity and then devise idea to reduce the time (focus on human effort and generate idea to use simple automation). From the concept of kaizen there come another philosophy of 5s.

5s is way of organizing things and having clean and beautiful place of work. So that you don't waste your time for searching and finding things. If the things are organized and properly tag and clothes in wardrobe are properly arranged., we would take less time to retrieve there are saving our effort.

The philosophy is that every human being has been god gifted is “Mind” and if human being carries the Mind which can think and imagine then why don't we utilise the same mind to generate ideas.

So putting human effort in unnecessary things is waste for us a human being and that's the idea of the thing. During my current visit the place i'm writing this article is place called Ena and now its is -6 degree outside 6.00 am in the morning. Throughout this week we saw some best factories and undertand more principles of Kaizen in various and believe me every time I come here I generate new ideas of way of working and being efficient.

With this article I just want to express my thoughts to my fellow rotarians and friends there are simple technique and we should learn and improve ourselves. I have being promoting this knowledge since 15 years now., You will find more details of kaizen on internet., but if you want to hear my experience I would be happy to come and address your club.

Signing off – Arigato Gozaimasu.

We request you all to share any information you may have with us on poonam@opportunitiesindia.com

Together lets celebrate the History of the geographical areas of our Incredible District 3141!

Let us continue the journey with little known
The Lost Port of Sopara.

*The Lost Port of Sopara

If I tell you that the unfashionable suburb of Nalla Sopara was one of the coolest townships in Emperor Asoka's sprawling empire, would you believe it?

Well, roll over Malabar Hill, for the port of Sopara is where the action was - it had the ships, the tourists and what's more, it had style! This town has not only been renowned for its splendid and magnificent past but is also famous for the numerous tourist places.

Nallasopara or Nala Sopara formerly known as Sopara or Supara, is a town within the Mumbai Metropolitan Region.

Sopara or Surparaka, as it was known in the past, had a glorious run not only as an important port on the western coast of India and but also as a major trade center. It had trade links with the Egyptians, Greeks, Romans, and the Middle East so much so that it finds mention in a 2000-year-old book Periplus of the Erythraean Sea which describes the navigation and trading opportunities along the coastal region of Red Sea with the Egyptian, African and Indian subcontinents.

It is also believed to be the capital of Apranta (old name for Konkan) and is also the oldest historical testament of Mumbai, in the form of Ashokan Edicts. Sopara is thought to be synonymous with the legendary port of Ophir, from where biblical kings bought sandalwood, ivory, and peacocks in the 8th century BCE. It is also the Suraparaka mentioned in the Mahabharata as well as the Supparaka of the Buddhist Jataka tales.

Around the time of the Buddha, it would have been the largest city on the west coast — the end point of caravan routes from Ujjain, converging with sea routes from Mesopotamia and Egypt. Ships capable of carrying upwards of 500 merchants docked at this bustling port. It was also from Sopara that Vijaya, who was to become the first king of Sri Lanka, departed with some 700 settlers to colonize and kick-start Lankan early history in the 3rd century BCE. Two Ashokan rock edicts (one of the major ones) have been unearthed here, suggesting that this port was thriving in Mauryan times too.

It seems that Ashoka strategically used this city to spread his message all over the world, as it was a flourishing port being used for overseas dealings. He sent a Greek Buddhist messenger, Dharmarakshita, to propagate the faith in the north-western region of India. This city is also believed to be the place from where Mahendra, the son of Ashoka, left for Sri Lanka with a bodhivriksha.

In April 1882 noted archaeologist, numismatist and epigraphist Bhagwan Indrajī excavated at the Burud Rajache Kot mound in Merdes village, near Sopara. The ruins of a Buddhist Stupa was found. Gazing up close at the colossal Sopara Stupa, one will be amazed to see the bricks were of such superior quality that this structure has survived for millennia just a few kilometres from the Nalasopara suburban train station. According to estimates the stupa may be an astonishing 2,200 years old!

The Sopara Stupa might well qualify as India's least visited tourist sight, despite its proximity to Bombay. A stone coffer was found from the center of the Stupa, which contained 8th to 9th century AD old eight bronze images of Maitreya Buddha. The artefact chest contained four more caskets of stone, crystal, silver and gold and there were plenty of gold flowers along with the thirteen pieces of earthenware, which seem to be the remains of a begging bowl.

These days Nallasopara is a not so-famous place, the Stupa is lying abandoned and eroding day by day. Instead of all the negligence, the city secures an eternal place in the ancient Hindu, Jain, and Buddhist literature.

The glorious history of Nallasopara calls for restoration and preservation work to retain the reminiscence of the nostalgic era.

Gallery

Jamini Roy

Jamini Roy is one of the major artists from the 20th century in the Indian art history and is regarded as the early masters of modernism in Indian art. He was the first Indian artist whose work was both quintessentially Indian and modern at the same time. He has experimented with Bengali folk paintings which were inspired by the Kalighat paintings along with the different village patuas. The main theme of his paintings was lives of rural Bengali and Indian festivities, celebrations like marriages. Throughout his works, his brush strokes were largely bold and sweeping. He used to paint on materials like cloth, mats and even wood coated with lime. The artist experimented with natural colors and pigments derived from mud, chalk powder and flowers. Roy, born in 1887 in Beliatare in West Bengal, India. He studied under Abanindranath Tagore, the founder of Bengal school and vice-principal at the institution at the Government College of Art, Kolkata, at age of 16. He received a diploma in Fine Arts in 1908. After graduating, Roy adopted the simple forms, flat colors, and humble paints of Bengali folk artists. Roy was honoured with Padma Bhushan (1955), by The Indian Government. Roy's works can be found in the collections of the Victoria and Albert Museum in London, the Harn Museum of Art at the University of Florida, and the National Gallery of Modern Art in New Delhi, among others.
