This is the last one in the series others - all had their worships with attendant festivities.

And a notable one in rural Bengal was Shiber gajan and Charak. Quite a number of these were accompanied by Kabigaan or jatra, and many had an attendant fair or mela too.

Education spread, social awareness escalated and public entertainment in the form of theatre or cinema became available to masses.

Thirteen festivities in a span of 12 months. That did identify the soft-hearted Bengalis. Bereft of pubs, theatre or cinema, festivity and celebration remained a cardinal avenue of recreation for the common folk, providing also a sense of belonging to the society.

For an agronomical society the sequential events of ploughing or planting, weeding or harvesting all became cause of a social ritual, of celebration. With passage of time many had withered out, but had replacements ready in the form of plethora of gods and goddesses. Ma Manasa (protector from snakebites), or Ma Sitala (savior from small pox), Ghetu alias Ghantakarna (prevents skin diseases) or Itu (protects children – no joke) and a myriad of

Charak

Bhadu of Purulia

A number of the religious festivities gradually tapered off, leaving space to handful of mainstream gods like Durga and her offspring – Laxmi the wealth mother, Saraswati the goddess of cerebral wealth, Ganesh granting success, or Kali with Deepawali enlightening our inner self. Other religions had their share too –Christmas or Bhadrotsav of Brahmo Samaj are typical representatives. And then were added festivities of smaller religious groups with festivities around their preachers – Sri Ramkrishna Deb and Baba Lokenath being prime examples.

Religion apart, loco-regional social festivals also are a part of life. Sarhul or Bhadu were the archaic ones, joined later on by Poushmela of Santiniketan or the later one – Book Fair, where books remain the crowd puller. And there always are the celebration of National days or birthdays of our deitified heroes.

Pilgrimage by book lovers

Whatever be the reason behind, the festivities are refreshing break from day-to-day drudgery, sort of weekends of life. They foster a sense of pride within a community, celebrating together their heritage, their culture and traditions.

Pujo-e Chai Natun Juto (New shoes at Puja)

On a materialistic point of view, too, festivities are boon to the economy. The artisans crafting beautiful idols or creating fantastic pandals from bamboo and cloth, the tour operators or the farmhand metamorphosed to the avatar of dhaki – it turns out to be primetime for all.

From garments to shoes, ornaments to automobiles, all sectors get a big fillup in this golden season. Flipkart did a business of Rs 600 crores in a span of ten hours last year. Like blood, money is also meant to be circulated.

Our journey through the season of festivities has started. We celebrated our traditional largest festival of Durga Puja, had a stopover on Laxmi puja and are awaiting eagerly for the Kali puja and Deepawali. Then will come the illuminated Christmas - our Jishu pujo, followed shortly by New Year's Day, Netaji Jayanti and Republic Day, the season culminating in our very own Valentines' Day –the Saraswati Puja.

Welcome to the rainbow season of festivity.

Every social interactions in life has its own custom and etiquette. Online meetings – which we are forced to adopt – is no exception. Found this in an issue of 'Light' – the bulletin of RC Garden Reach. Our thanks to the Editor Rtn Tanu Roy for kind permission to reprint it. — Ed.

Online Meeting Etiquette

Darryl Patterson Technology help and advice from Rotarians in District 7070

A lot of people have been thrown into the online meeting ring the past few weeks, companies like Zoom, Google (Meet) and GoToMeeting have seen millions of new users. Using these online conferencing tools have gotten a lot easier over the past few years, especially when using tablets or phones that have great cameras and microphones.

For those that are new to online conference meetings, it can feel a little foreign. Just like a face to face meeting, online meetings have their own little intricacies around the expected and often unspoken rules.

Here's the TL:DR (Too Long, Didn't Read) version of online meeting etiquette.

Be ready: Be sure to test your setup. You're going to be using a laptop, phone or desktop so use the device you plan on using to attend the meeting. Make sure the mic, speakers and video work BEFORE attending your first meeting.

Run a test meeting: To help everyone to be ready, book a test meeting specifically to help people get setup properly.

Mute is your friend: If you're not talking, mute your mic. Every conferencing system has a way to mute; usually a microphone icon will toggle your mic on and off.

Turn on video: Don't be shy; turn on your camera if you have one. It feels more like a meeting if you see people's faces.

Use chat: If there are a lot of people in the meeting, use the chat to ask questions or to express interest to talk.

Use a moderator: For really big meetings with 20+ people, assign one person to monitor the chat to handle questions.

Don't troubleshoot during the meeting: If you're struggling with connecting, don't hijack the meeting. This is why you test before you join.

Use the views: Most conferencing software will have more than one way to view the people on the call. Gallery or tile view is great when collaborating as a group as you get to see many faces. Speaker view is good when one person is doing a lot of talking.

Leave pauses: When you talk, it actually takes a second or so before everyone will hear what you said (its called latency). So after you ask a question or if you expect a response, leave a pause of a second or two before you jump back in.

Use a headset: If you have a headset, use it. You'll hear better, you'll sound better, and it stops sound from echoing.

Speaker etiquette: If you have someone who's speaking, make sure you are muted! But keep your camera on, the speaker will appreciate being able to see faces. And maybe switch to speaker view so you can see their face clearly.

FIRST WOMAN CONFIRMED AS ROTARY PRESIDENT-NOMINEE

EVANSTON, III. (October 1, 2020)

Jennifer Jones, member of the Rotary Club of Windsor-Roseland, Ontario, Canada, will become Rotary International's president for 2022-23, a ground-breaking selection that will make her the first woman to hold that office in the service organization's 115-year existence.

Jones, whose confirmation comes at a unique time in history, is inspired by how the organization and its global members continue to adapt, connect and serve their communities in new ways during the coronavirus pandemic. Jones says she wants to harness this moment of change to develop metric-driven goals that challenge us to innovate, educate and communicate opportunities that reflect today's realities.

"We know that Rotary is a place where leaders and those with the vision and drive to create change can thrive. And such leaders are found from every age, gender, race and background. Diversity, equity and inclusion should begin at the top, and for us to welcome new leaders into our organization and expand our ability to make an impact, we need to build stronger bridges that help everyone see themselves reflected, celebrated and valued here in Rotary," Jones said.

Jones also notes her tremendous pride in the way Rotarians have shown leadership in responding to and helping protect communities against COVID-19. So far, Rotary has provided US$29.7 million to support clubs in their response to COVID-19, with projects ranging from large-scale, transformative activities such as providing medical equipment to hospitals to small-scale, short-term activities like purchasing thermometers, protective medical gear, or other items for frontline medical professionals.

"Silver linings rise out of the most challenging circumstances," Jones said in her vision statement. "Our members are resolute in finding ways to aid those in need as the pandemic continues to underscore how Rotary is a global force for doing good in the world."

As Jones looks ahead to her presidential term, she confirms that she's prepared to take on existing and new challenges as society continues to evolve at a rapid pace, and like Rotary presidents before her, is eager to set Rotary on course for a robust and vibrant future.

"Years ago, I asked one of our incoming presidents what he wanted his legacy to be. He very quickly told me he wasn't interested in building a legacy and that he was interested in getting to work," said Jones. "Those words have always stuck with me, and I too simply want to get down to work."

FROM THE WORLD OF ROTARY

About Jennifer Jones

Jennifer is the Founder and President of Media Street Productions Inc., a twenty-five-year old, award-winning media company in Windsor, Ontario.

Jennifer has strengthened Rotary's reach and impact through her service in many roles including as Trustee of the Rotary Foundation, RI Vice President, and co-chair of the End Polio Now: Make History Today campaign. As a professional communicator, Jennifer also used her vocational strength to chair the advisory group that crafted Rotary's rebranding effort.

Working alongside government officials, celebrities and global leaders, she utilizes her voice to raise awareness and hundreds of millions of dollars to eradicate disease, support peace and provide clean water and sanitation in developing areas of the world.

Her skill as an expert storyteller inspires hope and promise and motivates people to take action.

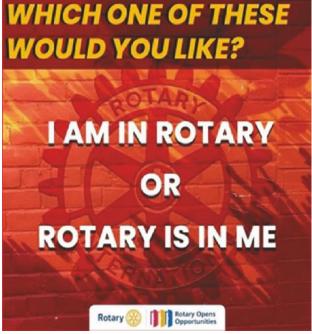

She has received many honors and recognitions including Rotary's Service Above Self Award and the Citation for Meritorious Service, the YMCA Peace Medallion, the Queen's Diamond Jubilee Medal, and Wayne State University's Peacemaker of the Year Award – a first for a Canadian. Jennifer is married to Rotarian Nick Krayacich, a family physician.
