Sima Banerjee, now Sima Chakraborty, hails from a culturally rich joint family where her passion for singing began in childhood. Her day would commence with practice at 5 am, serving as an alarm for her family. She received training in Rabindra Sangeet and classical music, supported significantly by her mother, Late Srimati Amita Banerjee. Despite challenges after marriage and lacking support from her new family, she initially had to set aside her aspirations in music. However, her determination prevailed. At the age of 60, she revived her singing career, now teaching numerous students and realizing her lifelong dream. Beyond her musical pursuits, Sima is a devoted wife and mother, inspiring her daughter much like her own mother inspired her. She is a pillar of support for her family, known for her sociability, kindness, and joy in others' happiness. Despite life's challenges, she exemplifies resilience, maintaining a positive outlook and spreading positivity.
