INSIGHTS FROM THE FRONTLINES OF BUSINESS WITH TANVIR GILL

Good afternoon, ladies and gentlemen. It's so good to be here, and thank you very much for inviting me for this session.

I started my career back in 2005 with CNBC TV18. I was with CNBC TV18 for roughly about five years. Then, I did about eight to nine years with ET Now in India, and I was just like, you know, what do I do next? Has there been a time where an Indian journalist, born and brought up in India, has ever been given a chance in an international newsroom? And I kept thinking: can I break into the international scene? Can I really get into an international newsroom — mainstream anchor?

And I remember that at that time I had watched this reel on Instagram by Priyanka Chopra and she said, when she moved to Hollywood — and I know it's a tall order to compare — but still, when you're aspiring to achieve something, when you're ambitious in life, you gain a lot of inspiration from people who've already been there and done that. So, she said in that video, when she moved to Hollywood, she said to one of her organisers — or whatever, agents — that "Look, I'm not going to take a side role. I'm going to move to the US, and I'm going to move to Hollywood if and only if I get a lead role." And that's how she landed Quantico.

So, I thought, this is interesting. I should kind of hold my ground and negotiate and try and work out a deal as a lead anchor with an international newsroom. And I was like I'm at ET Now here in India, so what better place can I go to but CNBC International — my alma mater in India, and they're obviously the parent company overseas.

Now, there's a difference — I just want to clarify — CNBC TV18 in India is not the original CNBC, it's a co-branding tie-up where CNBC has lent its brand to TV18, the Network18 group which is run by Reliance now. So CNBC International was a completely different ball game and a completely different entity.

I went to London. I met the boss of CNBC International. I said, "Oh, how does it work in the newsroom out here?" And he showed me around everything. And then we sat down, and I said, "OK, so if I needed a job, how much of my Indian accent would be a problem?" And he just stared at me, and he's like, "Are you asking for a job as a lead anchor?" I said, "Yeah. I want to be reporting from the international studio — either in London, Singapore, Hong Kong or the US. What would it take?" And he just had this notebook open — he turned it around and said, "Tell me your designation. Tell me the compensation you expect, and where you want to be based and what you want to cover." And literally, that very moment, Priyanka Chopra's reel played out in my mind, and I was like, I want to be a lead anchor — I'm not going to go as a reporter.

Then I wrote my compensation. And then, of course, the details of my work profile and stuff like that. And he looked and said, "Why don't you come back for a screen test?" So, I went for a screen test, and clearly, I hit it out of the park because they really liked me. And they said, "OK, fine. You know, there's a show called Street Signs Asia, based in Singapore. We think that you have the domain expertise, understanding India, so you can take that overseas. We've never had an Indian anchor talk about India in the context of what's happening with global markets, so that'll be useful for us. Why don't you come on board and let's take it from there?"

And this was back in 2019. So, I moved to Singapore with my parents. And it was a great experience. I've been in Singapore for six years and it's been such a steep learning curve. I mean, I can't even explain the kind of exposure, knowledge, and domain expertise I have built in covering Asia-Pacific markets. Earlier, it was just about India and looking at the world from India's lens. Now, I'm looking at India from the world's lens. And that's been a game changer.

I've come back to India, by the way. I've quit CNBC International. I'm back home. I just arrived five days ago, so I didn't have time to prepare because I'm still relocating and setting my base back home here in Mumbai. But it's been interesting, and I think a large part of why Satyan wanted me to do this was because obviously, through this journey, I have been able to interview a lot of global, influential speakers — whether they're business leaders, global CEOs, or big investors like Warren Buffett or, even for that matter, macroeconomic experts — people who look at the economy, markets, policy, politicians.

I interviewed Prime Minister Mahathir from Malaysia while he was in power, in just my first three months at CNBC International. It was like hitting the ground running, really, once I joined CNBC International. And the only way you learn at CNBC is by jumping into the deep end of the ocean and learning how to swim. So yeah, it's been a great experience.

I think the turning point in my career was interviewing Warren Buffett when I was still in India, in 2017. That interview changed the game, because at CNBC International — globally — Warren Buffett does everything. So, when I joined CNBC International, they actually treated me like royalty because many of them, many of the senior-most anchors at CNBC Global, had never interviewed Warren Buffett. Having Warren Buffett on my CV made a big deal. And the fact that I had a relationship with him and his team — that I'm still in touch with them — obviously was a feather in my cap.

I did post a few weeks ago before leaving CNBC International, highlighting what I really learned from all my big interviews. So, I've interviewed David Solomon, the CEO of Goldman Sachs, Satya Nadella of Microsoft, Shaktikanta Das, and a lot of policymakers. Many important and relevant speakers from Europe, from China, from Asia, from Korea, from Japan — the list is pretty endless. Like, I can't even recollect right now. But yeah, a lot of important speakers — Howard Marks from the markets, if any of you are from the financial markets in India or overseas.

So, all those experiences just added up to me getting more perspective about what it is really like to interview these stalwarts. And I put out a post on LinkedIn highlighting my five learnings from these big interviews. So, one of them was: if you are nervous about going into an interview — any interview, any conversation — that's okay. And the best way to address that nervousness is accepting it to yourself and to the other person and making light of the situation, because many a times, both sides are nervous, right? And that just builds up, and you're like, "Oh, how do I break into this conversation? How do I break the ice?"

Breaking the ice is as simple as saying, "I'm really nervous," and, you know, sometimes it really works. I'll give you the example of David Solomon. I was like, 'this is the CEO of Goldman Sachs. Oh my god.' I was like breaking my head all night: the golden rule, asking, I have only 16 minutes — and 16 minutes can be stretched out to max 20 — and I have my questions ready, and I have to make it seem very, you know, very easy, very fluid, very conversational, because CNBC is very big on conversational interviews.

And so, I was really fretting over that. And when I came in and...

ASSIMILATION OVER APPETISERS: AN EVENING AT THE SARAFS

Rtn. Ptn. Radhika and Rtn. Abhishek Saraf graciously opened their home for a delightful assimilation over dinner and drinks. The gathering brought together a vibrant mix of new and longstanding members of the Rotary family, creating the perfect setting for meaningful conversations and warm connections.

While senior members shared stories and insights from their enriching Rotary journeys, the newer members eagerly introduced themselves, building bonds that will surely strengthen the spirit of fellowship.

The Sarafs' impeccable hospitality, paired with an array of sumptuous food and fine drinks, added a special charm to the evening. It was not just a social gathering, but a memorable celebration of camaraderie, community and the shared joy of being part of Rotary.

FROM THE DESK OF THE PRESIDENT

Dear Friends,

I am delighted to announce the formation of the Centenary Year Committee for the Rotary Club of Bombay as approved by the Board of Directors of the Club.

As we approach our momentous 100th year, this committee will play a pivotal role in ensuring a year of impactful and memorable projects and celebrations. The Centenary Year Committee has been established with the crucial mandate to ideate, plan, and execute a diverse range of activities that will mark this significant milestone in our club's history.

The scope of the Centenary Year Committee will encompass the following key areas:

Ideation: Brainstorming and developing creative and engaging ideas for events, projects, and initiatives that align with the Rotary's mission and the significance of our centenary. This includes exploring opportunities for community service, fellowship, and showcasing the club's rich legacy.

Planning: Developing detailed plans for the selected activities, including timelines, budgets, resource allocation, and logistical arrangements. This will involve coordinating with various stakeholders, including club members, potential sponsors, and community partners.

Execution: Overseeing the successful implementation of the planned activities all the way through to the centenary year. This will require effective leadership, teamwork, and the active participation of committee members and the wider club membership.

The Centenary Year is a unique opportunity for the Rotary Club of Bombay to reflect on its past achievements, celebrate its present impact, and inspire future generations of Rotarians. The Centenary Year Committee will be instrumental in ensuring that this milestone is commemorated in a fitting and impactful manner.

We encourage all members to extend their full support and cooperation to the Centenary Year Committee as they embark on this important endeavour. Further updates regarding the committee's progress and opportunities for member involvement will be shared in due course.

Sincerely,
Satyan Israni
President
Rotary Club of Bombay

CWC LIGHTHOUSE – MAGICAL ANNUAL SUMMER CAMP

On Saturday, April 12th, 2025, the CWC Lighthouse Centre was brimming with excitement as it hosted the much-awaited Annual Summer Camp celebration. The event brought together 52 enthusiastic children for an afternoon of wonder, laughter and joyful learning.

The showstopper of the day was an enthralling performance by the talented Anil Kumar Sir, whose magical juggling act left the children wide-eyed with amazement. He astounded the crowd by transforming a single umbrella into two and performing the incredible feat of pulling twelve sticks from one stick, drawing gasps and applause from the audience. The magic continued with a bubble show that turned the room into a playground of joy. Children not only watched the colourful bubbles floating through the air but actively joined in, blowing, chasing and gleefully popping bubbles with contagious energy.

The event concluded on a heartwarming note with a special sweet treat for every child. Their glowing smiles were a true reflection of the happiness and wonder they experienced throughout the day. These celebrations are deeply meaningful to the children, who look forward to them with great anticipation. They are more than just fun—they offer exposure, confidence-building and joy in learning, which is central to the Lighthouse approach.

Lighthouse is grateful to the Rotary Club of Bombay and the extended community for their continued support. Their belief in the mission allows such impactful, enriching experiences to be created for every child served. Thank you for being a part of the Lighthouse journey—where learning meets joy and every child shines.

CWC LIGHTHOUSE LIGHTS UP SUMMER WITH JOYFUL CELEBRATION

On April 9th, 2025, CWC Lighthouse hosted a vibrant summer function, a heartwarming celebration that brought together students, teachers and proud parents. The event was graced by the presence of Jhanvi Vissanji and Manisha Ahuja from VIDYA, whose support continues to inspire the entire Lighthouse community.

The children lit up the stage with energetic performances, dancing to cheerful seasonal songs like Penguins, Drip Drop Rain and Autumn. They also recited delightful poems on the sun, clouds and other wonders of nature.

Dressed in adorable costumes — as sunflowers, butterflies and more — the children captured everyone's hearts. But the moment that truly stole the show was their charming peacock dance, full of grace and joy.

Parents were overjoyed, many sharing how their children proudly sang songs and recited poems at home. When asked where they had learned all this, the children beamed and said, "We learned at Lighthouse, not at school!"

Another beautiful highlight of the event was the remarkable growth of the teachers involved in the project. Many have gone on to secure better job opportunities, crediting the Rotary Club of Bombay and their mentors Rtn. Ptn. Ekta Shah and Manisha Ahuja for their personal and professional development.

"It's not just about educating students," said Manisha. "It's about creating lasting change in the community."

With each smile, dance and round of applause, the summer function stood as a shining testament to what Lighthouse stands for — joyful learning, empowered educators and a thriving community.

BY: NMJ STUDENTS GEAR UP FOR SOMAIYA SUMMER SCHOOL

On April 11th, 2025, a preparatory meeting was held at Bhavishya Yaan's NMJ School for three students — Shreya, Shubham, and Tanuja — who have been selected to attend the upcoming Summer School Programme at Somaiya University. Scheduled from May 5th to 10th, this immersive programme promises a week of learning, exploration, and personal growth.

The session was attended not only by the three selected students but also by Naitik and Parth, who participated in the previous year's camp, along with their mentor, Jaya Ma'am. It was an interactive discussion where Naitik and Parth shared their firsthand experiences, giving the new students a detailed insight into life at Somaiya.

They described the vastness of the campus, pointing out the various faculty buildings, hostels for boys and girls, the canteen, and a range of outdoor sports facilities such as a swimming pool, football, basketball, badminton, and even rock climbing.

Recounting their week-long experience, they talked about the orientation that kicked off the programme, where each student received a timetable, diary, pen, and a shoulder bag. Mornings began with warm-up sessions, followed by informative lectures exploring career paths in engineering, sciences, commerce, humanities, and graphic arts. These sessions continued post-lunch and concluded with enjoyable games or activities in the final hour.

They highlighted how the career talks were helpful in shaping thoughts about future goals. Sports and games were fun and easy to engage in, with trainers present, especially at the swimming pool, offering a great chance to learn new skills.

The programme also included a visit to the Reserve Bank of India in South Mumbai, where they were given valuable insights. Naitik and Parth shared photos and videos from their time at the camp, adding to the excitement.

Practical tips were offered as well. They advised the students to carry clothes, a bedsheet, and toiletries. Laundry is available at a charge, vending machines are accessible, and carrying small change is advisable. Rooms are shared, clean, and well maintained.

The programme ended with a certificate distribution ceremony — a moment of pride and farewell. They left, carrying a hope to return as a full-time students in the Somaiya campus.

A MELODIC GIFT OF LOVE: ANANDA SEVA BY THE RATHORE FAMILY

In an evening that beautifully embodied Rotary's motto 'Service Above Self,' the Rotary Club of Bombay's flagship project, Ananda Yaan, was elevated by the soul-stirring sounds of music. Ananda Yaan, dedicated to the holistic well-being of underserved senior citizens, was graced by the extraordinary Rathore family — Mr. Gopal Singh Rathore, Dr. Pooja Rathore, and Mr. Mahi Rathore, all renowned for their mastery in the art of music.

The Rathore family's performance was more than an event; it was an offering — an Ananda Seva. The music created an atmosphere of joy, nostalgia, and peace, lighting up the hearts of the senior citizens in attendance.

Mr. Gopal, known as the 'Bhajan Samraat of Rajasthan,' enthralled the audience with his powerful vocals and tabla mastery. His performance, steeped in decades of musical heritage, resonated with devotion and cultural richness.

Dr. Pooja, a finalist of Sa Re Ga Ma Pa, captivated the audience with her versatile voice, singing classical ragas, bhajans, ghazals, and Bollywood melodies. Her emotionally charged performance touched the hearts of all.

Mr. Mahi, a finalist on Voice of India, brought a contemporary energy to the evening, combining modern compositions with classical traditions. His dynamic guitar playing and passion engaged the audience, showing that the traditions of the past live on in inspiring hands.

This evening was a celebration of compassion, connection, and culture, deeply cherished by the Ananda Yaan seniors. The Rotary Club of Bombay extends heartfelt thanks to the Rathore family for this act of seva and to all involved in making the evening memorable.

WATER RESOURCES PROJECT FOR COMMUNITY WELLBEING

The Rotary Clubs of Bombay and Mira Road came together to implement a joint water resources project, addressing the essential need for clean drinking water in key public spaces across Mira Road. This meaningful initiative was made possible through CSR funding, and the clubs extend their sincere gratitude to President Satyan Israni for his invaluable support and partnership.

The first project took place at the Corporation School in Mira Road, where a 60-litre water cooler with a filtration unit was installed. This installation now benefits 140 children, ensuring they have access to clean and safe drinking water during school hours.

The second phase of the project focussed on the Naya Nagar Police Station, also in Mira Road. An 80-litre water cooler was installed to cater to both the station's staff and the general public. This effort not only supports frontline workers but also benefits the wider community that frequents the station.

The third installation was completed at Gramin Vidyalaya in Mahajan Wadi, Mira

Road. With a capacity of 80 litres, the unit now serves 450 students, significantly improving the learning environment by addressing a basic but crucial need.

These efforts highlight the power of partnership and community engagement in driving sustainable change. The Rotary clubs involved are thankful for the support received and look forward to continuing their mission to improve access to essential resources for those in need. This project stands as a testament to what can be achieved through shared purpose and collaboration.
