THE news of the sudden and unexpected death of Zubeen Garg in Singapore thundered through the people of Assam on a normal, busy afternoon on September 19, 2025. The bewildered people, without knowing why, started to crowd the streets of Assam. Normal life came to a standstill. People refused to believe that their beloved Zubeen Garg, the fearless artist of Assam, was dead. Zubeen Garg went to Singapore to perform in the North-East festival, and he died in mysterious circumstances. The mystery and suspicion surrounding the tragic event that snatched the golden voice of Assam drew people from all corners, and the world saw a historic gathering in Guwahati to mourn the death of an artist. Lakhs of people from all walks of life, fans and followers of Zubeen, artistes, intellectuals, workers, riksha-drivers, wielders, shopkeepers, housewives, youths and even people of older generations who occasionally disapprove some of Zubeen's non-conformist attitudes, also spent sleepless nights, cried, screamed, voiced their anger and rallied in the streets demanding proper investigation of the incident leading to his death.

But what gave Zubeen unparalleled popularity and love from the people was not only his golden voice and beautiful songs. People also loved Zubeen, the man. He was a rebel artist with a fearless heart filled with the warmth of love for the common people. He was a philanthropist who shared his earnings with the poor. Lines from his songs like,

“Dhumuhar xote mor

Bohujugore nason” (My heart dances with thunderstorms for ages!) made people fearless to face (dance with) adversities (thunderstorm), gave courage to the young generation.
