EDITORIAL

"Raise your words, not your voice. It is rain that grows flowers, not thunder." – Rumi

Well said, the raised voice with harsh words is like a rough sound but well curated words can imprint an impact.

The purpose of the speech "why I stand for" is to propagate the views by the speaker to the audience.

In any election; school, college, politics, corporate or NGO, the aspirants present their vision, strength and weakness to persuade the voters. The Candidate's speech should be encouraging and explanatory. It should contain the need of the post and the plan to justify it.

The speech has to have some humour so that it can encourage the audience to be attentive and engrossed. It should have information about the post, its demand and the systematic plan to obtain the goal. After the entertainment and information, it's time to access the influences you have made on the audience.

The candidate should communicate in a powerful way so that after deliberation people should think and feel the impact.
