EDITORIAL

Environmental sustainability is the conservation of natural resources like water, trees, and fossil fuels. If the society overuses the natural resources, we may run out of these facilities in the future. So, we have to take care of the Earth for creating a healthy and better living for both the current and future generations. It is about using natural resources wisely, reducing pollution, and protecting the environment so that the planet remains a safe and beautiful place for all living things. Sustainable practices such as using renewable energy, like solar or wind power, help to reduce our dependence on harmful fossil fuels. It also helps to cut down on pollution and greenhouse gas emissions that contribute to climate change. Next important practice is to curtail the use of plastic and non-biodegradable materials to reduce waste, recycle the items, compost organic waste and reduce the amount of trash.

One single person cannot change this problem. It needs sharing ideas, resources, and responsibility for a faster and effective change. It is time to prioritize and take unified action by individuals, communities, organizations and Governments to create a better future and nature.

OUR PLANET

By PP Rtn. Ranjit Das

God has given us an incredible gift - the beautiful world in which we live. Naturally, though, as we share this planet with so many others, we run the risk of seeing its beauty diminished and its resources depleted. Making the atmosphere polluted with release of poisonous gas, deforesting cause global warming, etc. while we have every right to use the resources placed in and around the earth, we also need to recognize our responsibility to respect the earth as to preserve its resources for future generation. It would be our responsibility for better stewardship to leave our children and grandchildren to enjoy the resources as we enjoy today. We can work together to do our part for the generation next.
