EDITORIAL

"Courage taught me no matter how bad a crisis gets ... any sound investment will eventually pay off."

In the span of life, people invest in a plan; it may be in relationship, time, service or money.

Investment in a healthy relationship makes you feel supported and connected, but for this, every person should allow each other to maintain their independence. Communication and setting boundaries are two important components of a healthy relationship. Individuals should invest in themselves for their own well-being and also to create healthy and happy relationships with others.

At present, time is the most valuable asset. It has to be properly and wisely utilised to create, to learn, to grow, and to achieve our goals. It should be carefully allocated like finance to yield a significant return.

Investment in service gives benefits to two sectors of people. The person who provides services gets peace of mind and satisfaction, and the other side gets all the basic needs.

Financial investment is for future growth and income. It is the source of major finance requirements like real estate, education, or retirement.

All the investments in life will give you a good return if it's planned properly. The high-risk investments give a good return. We should have the courage to take risks and implement them.
