The two most important days in your life are the day you are born and the day you find out why."

-- Mark Twain

From the Editor

As we step into the 78th year of independence, it is time for some introspection. We have indeed come a fairly long way, both literally and metaphorically. The green and white revolutions, development in science, technology and space research, enhancement of legal rights and the digital revolution, among others, have undoubtedly made us proud. But we also face serious challenges. Rampant poverty, illiteracy, homelessness, inadequate healthcare facilities, unemployment and underemployment, and corruption, for instance, are all major issues that require attention. The digital age has also brought along with it its own challenges. Issues like data privacy, cyber security, and the digital divide are becoming increasingly relevant. India's journey towards freedom is not just about breaking the chains of colonialism; it is also about building a society based on equality and justice. How far have we succeeded in this?

Another pressing issue of our times is the environment. As we celebrate our independence, we must remember that true freedom also means living in harmony with nature. Climate change, pollution, and the depletion of natural resources, are causing havoc across the world. We only have to look around our own city to realise this.

But the government alone cannot be expected to take up all these marathon tasks and effectively solve all the problems. It must be remembered that rights come along with responsibilities and as responsible citizens, we have to put in our efforts as well. It has been seen that in partnership with the government, organisations such as Rotary can contribute positively to the community. Rotary in India has grown dramatically since the establishment of the first club in 1920. By continuing what we have been doing in terms of community service and by upscaling our activities, we can certainly make a difference.

Rotary History

A HOME FOR HEADQUARTERS

The idea that Rotary should own its headquarters dates back at least to the 1920 convention, when Albert Adams, 1919-20 Rotary president, told attendees that he hoped to someday see the headquarters in a beautiful building of Rotary's own.

The National Association of Rotary Clubs — now Rotary International — formed in 1910 and had its headquarters in the Chicago, Illinois, USA, office of its secretary, Chesley R. Perry. In March 1911, Rotary's headquarters moved to rented space in the First National Bank Building, one of many downtown Chicago rentals.

In 1914, Rotary set up its headquarters in the Karpen Building on South Michigan Avenue. Citing increasing rent after World War I, Rotary moved to the Atwell Building in 1923, then to several more buildings after that.

After so many moves, some Rotary leaders began to call for a world headquarters that RI itself would own. Delegates at the 1921 convention attempted to pass a resolution to purchase a site for a building of Rotary's own, but they were unsuccessful. The 1928 convention delegates adopted a similar resolution, which had two notable conditions: There would be no increase in the per capita tax or assessment on clubs, and the site was to be in Chicago.

Finally, in 1943, the debate over sites got underway when the RI Board appointed a headquarters committee consisting of 1939-40 RI Director Roy Weaver from Colorado, 1942-43 RI Director Fred Haas from Nebraska, and 1935-36 RI President Ed Johnson.

The 1944 convention delegates approved expanding the headquarters search beyond Chicago. Many rotarians however reinforced the connection between Rotary and the city, noting that "Chicago business and civic leaders have a justifiable pride centered in the fact that Rotary is an offspring of Chicago."

Rotary leaders gathered at 1600 Ridge Avenue for a groundbreaking ceremony in 1953, and the building opened in August of the following year. In that first month, 250 Rotary members and friends visited to see it for themselves. Despite initial room to grow and a later addition, Rotary eventually outgrew that space. In 1987, Rotary purchased the building on Sherman Avenue in Evanston from Baxter Travenol Laboratories. Known today as One Rotary Center, that building is still home to Rotary International World Headquarters and welcomes more than 2,000 visitors a year.

INSPIRING QUOTES
BY FAMOUS ROTARIANS

“I believe every human has a finite number of heartbeats. I don’t intend to waste any of mine”.

-Neil Armstrong

Neil Alden Armstrong (August 5, 1930 – August 25, 2012) was an American astronaut and aeronautical engineer who, in 1969, became the first person to walk on the Moon. He was also a naval aviator, test pilot, and university professor. A Rotarian belonging to the Rotary Club of Wapakoneta, Ohio, his quoteresonates with Rotary’s philosophy of making every moment count in the service of humanity.

INTERESTING TRIVIA

Before 1920, it was actually possible to send children through the U.S. Postal Service, but certain conditions had to be met. The children needed to weigh under 50 pounds, and stamps were attached to their clothing as payment. Surprisingly, this method was often more affordable than buying a train ticket. During the journey, the children would ride in the mail car of a train, where they were supervised and provided with food by the mail clerks. One remarkable instance of this unusual practice involved a child travelling over 700 miles from Florida to Virginia, with just 15 cents worth of stamps.
