ROTARY INTERNATIONAL NEWS

ROTARY PROJECTS AROUND THE WORLD

United States

Students learned to become environmental "solutionists" at a Maryland Rotary club's youth summit, organizing battery and plastic recycling drives and teaching peers about growing trees. Teens at the environmental summit, the second hosted by the Rotary Club of Southern Frederick County (Urbana), joined a coalition of Interactors and other young people who volunteer to rescue uneaten school cafeteria food and compost waste. The students advocate with school leaders and state lawmakers, backed by Rotary members who support the expansion of the Lunch Out of Landfills initiative. The summit's goal is to give students skills and confidence to push for change in their communities. "Young people bring an incredible energy and urgency to climate action," says Mary Jo Anderson, the club's president.
